

Abstract

An Nabi Elias village is a Palestinian village in the Qalqilya Governorate, and it is an area located at the boundaries so it's an important site. Moreover, it faces a lot of problems and obstacles caused by the continuous procedures done by the Zionist occupation through confiscating the land to build up settlements and open detour roads and most importantly to construct the Separation Wall, in which this village wasn't exposed to any care or attention by the PNA on the level of the development projects.

The importance of this study lies in the urgent need to study the existing reality for the village when noticing the limitation of the spatial expansion in it where there is no enough space to be freely expanded in the right way and this is because of the existing of the separation wall and AlfiManashi settlement.

The study methodology is based on three axes: First axis is the generalized theoretical axis which contains the theoretical foundations and concepts which is related to the planning within the obstacles and challenges. The second axis is the informative axis which studies the actual situation and the geographic & physical characteristics of the city. The third axis is the analytical and assessment axis through bonding the theories and the concepts with the informative axis through using the concluding and analytical methods.

One of the important results which the study achieved is a detailed plan for the village.

The study recommended in the necessity of making a strong relation between An Nabi Elias village with the surrounded villages, and saving the agricultural identity for the village.
