INTRODUCTON

Traditional farming decisions often rely on experience or scattered online resources, which can delay identifying plant diseases and lead to crop losses. Access to experts is also limited and not always organized, while agricultural products and services are often spread across different platforms. This creates a need for a unified system that supports farmers with crop care, guidance, and marketplace services in a smart and accessible way.

WHAT IS BLOOM ?

Bloom is a smart agriculture platform designed to help farmers manage their crops, receive AI-based guidance, and access expert support and marketplace services. It combines web and mobile applications to provide an efficient, organized, and modern farming experience.

Today's Farming Tip

Given the patchy rain and high humidity in Ramallah, I recommend covering your orchids' pots with a breathable cloth or mesh today to prevent water spots from forming on their delicate leaves. This is because excess moisture can cause fungal diseases to thrive on orchids, so keeping them dry will help maintain healthy growth. By doing this, you'll be protecting your orchids from potential damage caused by the current weather

⚠ Not recommended for the selected environment

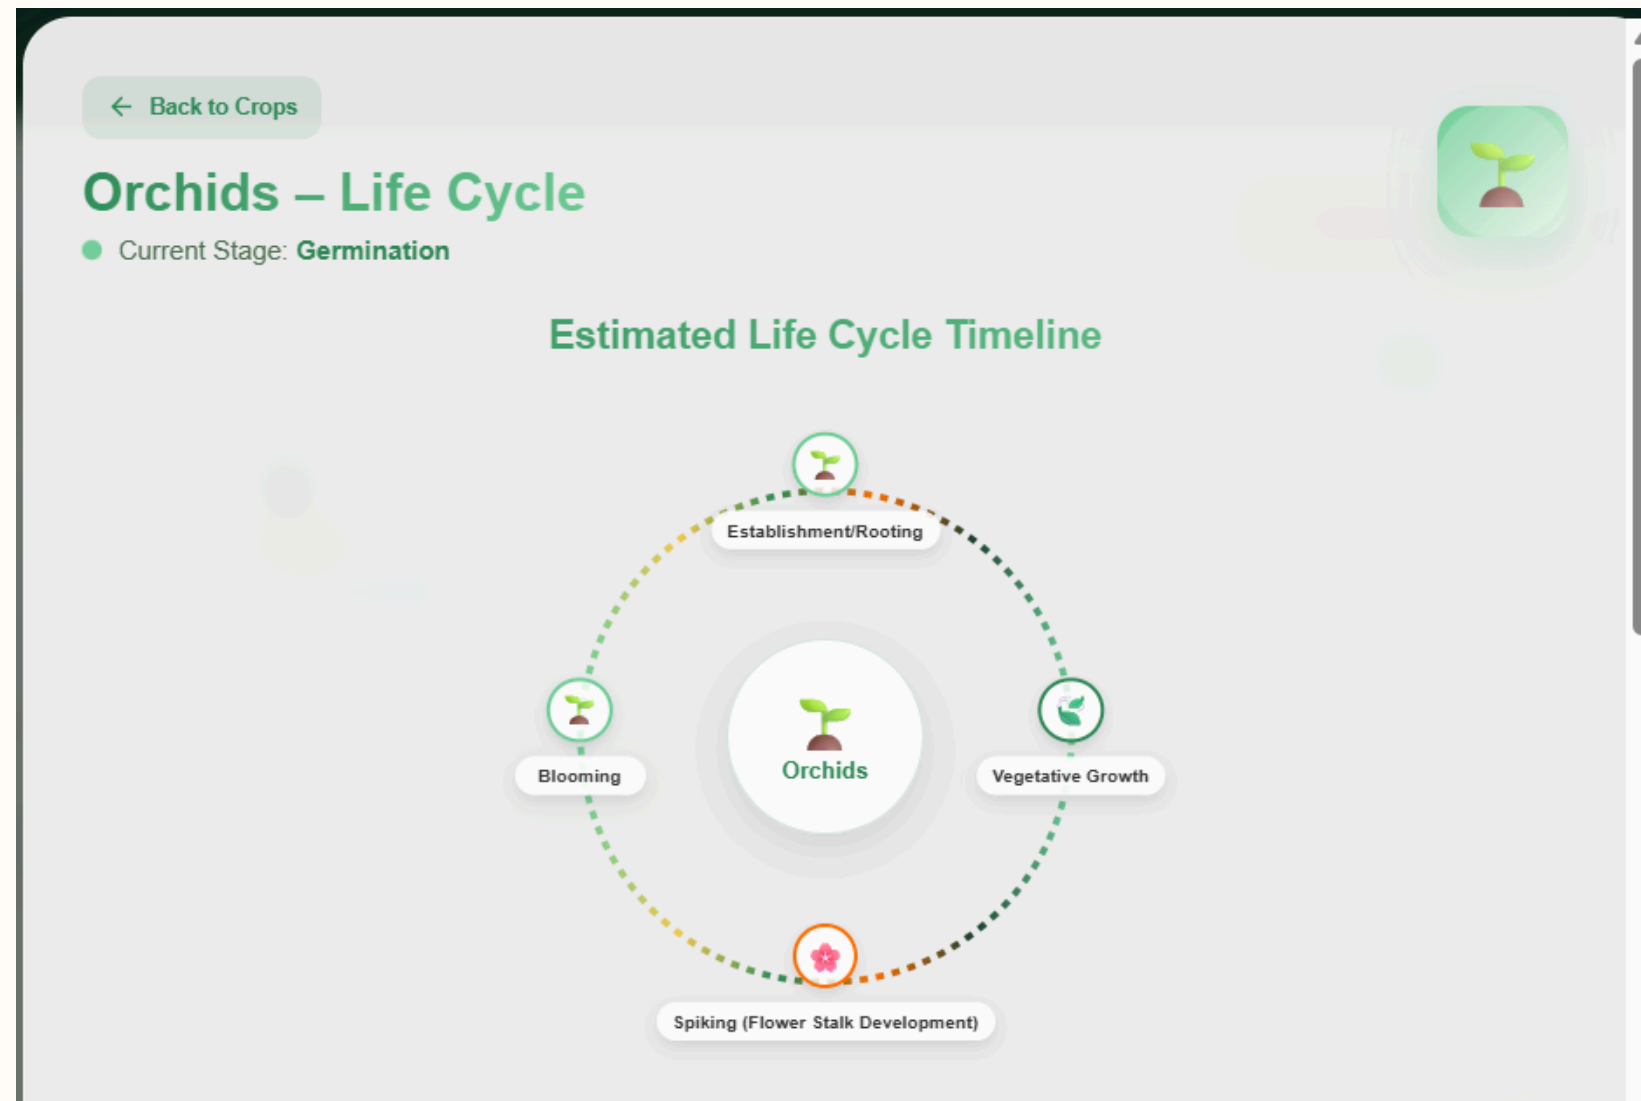

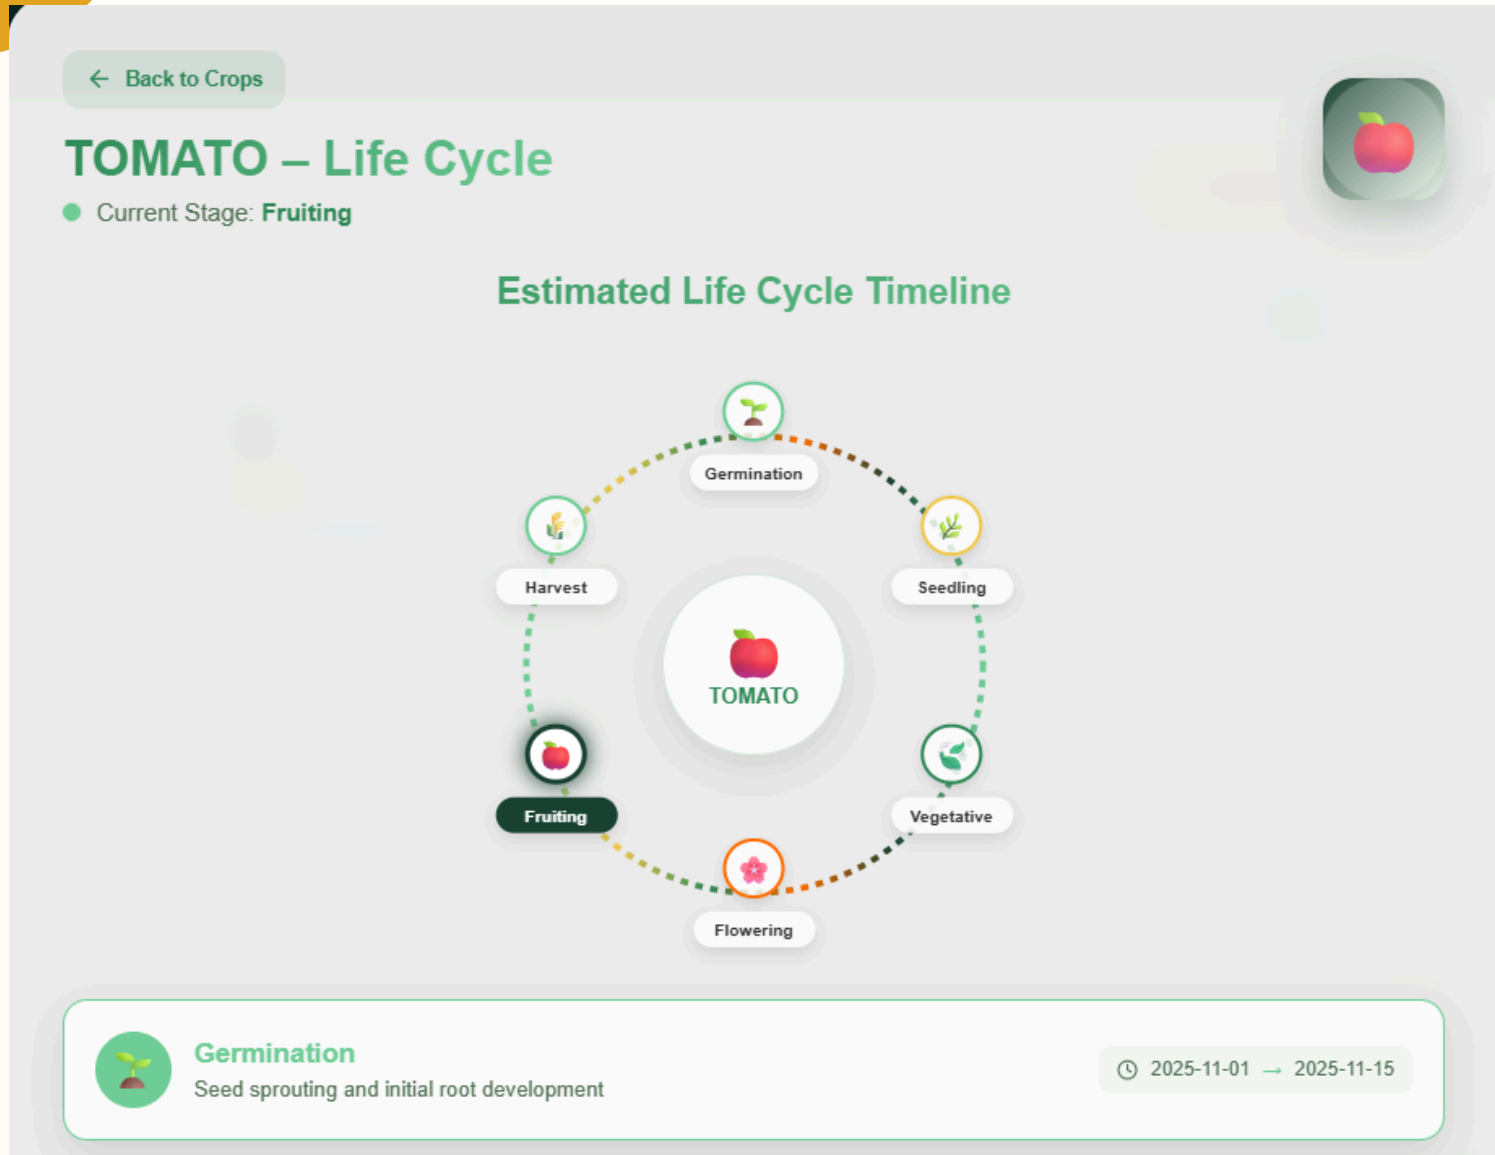

Most common orchids are epiphytes and will die in clay soil due to lack of aeration. Nablus winter temperatures can drop below 10C at night, which is dangerous for tropical orchids like Phalaenopsis.

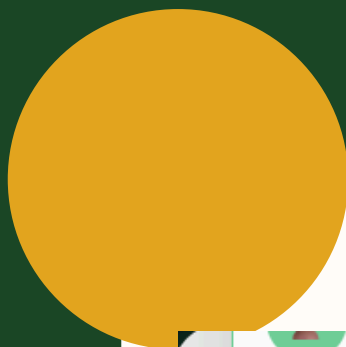

Recommended environment: Indoor • Location: A bright window facing East or West with filtered sunlight • Soil: Orchid bark mix consisting of fir bark, perlite, and charcoal

Watering Plan

For tomatoes, keep soil consistently moist but not waterlogged. Water 3–4 times per week in warm weather, 1–1.5 liters per plant each time. Loamy soil is ideal; keep it evenly moist but not soggy.

Fertilizer

Use a balanced NPK fertilizer early (e.g., 10-10-10) every 2–3 weeks until flowering. Once flowers appear, switch to a fertilizer higher in phosphorus and potassium (e.g., 5-10-10) every 2–3 weeks. Avoid too much nitrogen later, as it increases leaves and reduces fruit set.

AI Care Tips

Provide at least 6–8 hours of sunlight per day if possible. Keep the area around the plant clean and remove dead or yellow leaves regularly. Check the underside of leaves for pests such as aphids or whiteflies and treat early with safe methods (like neem oil) if needed. For tomatoes, support the plant with stakes or cages and remove suckers if you want a more open structure and larger fruits.

Hi

You 03:14 PM
How do I remove agricultural pests?

Bloom AI 03:18 PM
Removing agricultural pests requires a multi-faceted approach that involves cultural, biological, chemical, and mechanical methods. Here's a comprehensive guide to help you manage common agricultural pests.

"Before starting"

- "Identify the pest": Accurately identify the pest species, as some pests can be beneficial or neutral.
- "Assess the situation": Evaluate the severity of the infestation and the extent of damage caused by the pest.
- "Consult with experts": Talk to agricultural specialists, extension agents, or crop advisors for guidance on the most effective methods for your specific region and crop.

"Cultural Methods"

- "Crop rotation": Rotate crops to break the life cycle of pests and reduce the risk of infestation.
- "Sanitation": Remove weeds, debris, and infested plants to prevent pest spread.
- "Irrigation management": Avoid overwatering, which can attract pests and create an ideal environment for them.
- "Soil preparation": Improve soil health through organic amendments, tillage, or conservation agriculture practices.

"Biological Methods"

- "Beneficial insects": Introduce beneficial insects, such as lady beetles, lacewings, or parasitic wasps, to prey on pests.
- "Predatory nematodes": Use microscopic worms that attack and kill insect larvae.
- "Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt)": Apply Bt, a bacterium that produces toxins harmful to certain pest insects.

"Chemical Methods"

- "Insecticides": Apply insecticides as a last resort, following the recommended guidelines for application rates, timing, and safety precautions.
